

"Whether I'm creating new economic development programs or providing assistance to businesses in the local area, my education from the Woodrow Wilson School has given me the tools necessary to succeed in the public sector. As I continue to develop my career, I am encouraged knowing that I am prepared for the challenges ahead, and I am among the few that can always refer to the Woodrow Wilson School as 'home'."

MASTER'S DEGREE IN PUBLIC POLICY

A ONE-YEAR PROGRAM FOR MID-CAREER PROFESSIONALS

The Woodrow Wilson School's M.P.P. program provides rising leaders in the international and domestic policy arenas an opportunity to expand their organizational skills and intellectual breadth to compete in an increasingly complex global environment.

The Princeton Difference. The resources of the Woodrow Wilson School and Princeton University provide the ideal setting for this rigorous one-year residential program. The School's faculty, curriculum, and research facilities are recognized throughout the world for excellence.

Financial Assistance. Our generous policy meets the full demonstrated needs of all admitted students. More than three-quarters of graduate students at the School receive financial aid, which for most includes full tuition and a stipend for living expenses.

Qualifications. Applicants must possess a minimum of seven (7) years of professional experience in domestic or international government agencies, and/or experience in the nonprofit sector. Successful candidates demonstrate creativity, leadership, a commitment to public service, and the intellectual capacity to thrive in a demanding academic setting.
